Self-Advocacy Training & Internships For Students with Disabilities

Summer Enrollment Now Open

In partnership with Washington's Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, Edmonds College is offering classes and internships this summer to help students with disabilities prepare for college and the workplace. Classes are provided at no cost to students, and internships pay minimum wage.

All classes will include opportunities to learn self-advocacy and workplace readiness skills, discover personal strengths, and create a strengths-based resume. Students not doing internships will also be able to participate in informational interviews and job site tours from 12 to 1 p.m.

Students are eligible if they:

- are 14-21 years old (16-21 if applying for internships)
- have a documented disability (IEP, 504, medically diagnosed, or signed up for accommodation with Edmonds College's Services for Students with Disabilities)
- are enrolled in the K-12 system, a transitional program, or a college/university
